HONORABLE MENTION

ATLANTIS

Being set on the idea
 Of getting to Atlantis,
 You have discovered of course
 Only the Ship of Fools is Making the voyage this year,
 As gales of abnormal force
 Are predicted, and that you
 Must therefore be ready to Behave absurdly enough
 To pass for one of The Boys,
 At least appearing to love
 Hard liquor, horseplay and noise.
 Should storms, as may well happen,
 Drive you to anchor a week
 In some old harbour-city
 Of Ionia, then speak
 With her witty scholars, men
 Who have proved there cannot be
 Such a place as Atlantis:
 Learn their logic, but notice
 How their subtlety betrays
 A simple enormous grief;
 Thus they shall teach you the ways
 To doubt that you may believe.
 If, later, you run aground
 Among the headlands of Thrace
 Where with torches all night long
 A naked barbaric race

Leaps frenziedly to the sound
 Of conch and dissonant gong;
 On that stony savage shore
 Strip off your clothes and dance, for Unless you are capable
 Of forgetting completely
 About Atlantis, you will Never finish your journey.
 Again, should you come to gay
 Carthage or Corinth, take part
 In their endless gaiety;
 And if in some bar a tart,
 As she strokes your hair, should say
 'This is Atlantis, dearie,'
 Listen with attentiveness
 To her life story: unless
 You become acquainted now
 With each refuge that tries to Counterfeit Atlantis, how
 Will you recognize the true?
 Assuming you beach at last
 Near Atlantis, and begin
 The terrible trek inland
 Through squalid woods and frozen
 Tundras where all are soon lost;
 If, forsaken then, you stand,
 Dismissal everywhere,
 Stone and snow, silence and air,
 Remember the noble dead

And honour the fate you are,
 Travelling and tormented,
 Dialectic and bizarre.
 Stagger onward rejoicing'
 And even then if, perhaps Having actually got
 To the last col, you collapse
 With all Atlantis gleamin'
 Below you yet you cannot Descend, you should still be proud
 Just to peep at Atlantis
 In a poetic vision:
 Give thanks and lie down in peace,
 Having seen your salvation.
 All the little household gods
 Have started crying, but say
 Good-bye now, and put to sea.
 Farewell, dear friend, farewell: may
 Hermes, master of the roads
 And the four dwarf Kabiri,
 Protect and serve you always;
 And may the Ancient of Days
 Provide for all you must do
 His invisible guidance,
 Lifting up, friend, upon you
 The light of His countenance.

MEETING

One there lived on the east side of the city
One who wished to meet
One who lived on the west side of the city
A thousand miles away.

A thousand years went by.

Then the one who lived on the east side of the city
Set out on the main street
And met the one who lived on the west side of the city
Coming that way.

A thousand years.

Miraculous life! that in its brief and mortal
Progress achieved this union of intents,
Inevitability sprung from the improbable,
Volition moving in the paths of chance.

THE TRAVELLER

Into the forest again
whence all roads depend this way and that to lead him back.

Upon his shoulders
he places boulders
upon his eye
the high wide sky.
